12 Pounds of FREE Survival Seeds Per Family Per Year

Unlike ordinary mail-order seeds, these seeds are GUARANTEED to grow in YOUR climate and altitude...

12 lbs. of FRESH (Less than 12 month)

500,000+ seeds

INSURES you'll have plenty when the time comes... all 100% FREE!

Dear Friend,

In a real emergency, seeds are worth more than gold.

This may become all too apparent in the next credit meltdown, as food supply lines are tested to the point that grocery store shelves are quickly emptied.

No wonder people have flocked to pay $100 or more for a small seed cache from several mail order companies, but here is the truth:

Most survival seed suppliers are ripping you!

How?

1. They are charging an arm and a leg for seeds you can easily get for free if you just know where to look.
2. They are not really giving you enough seeds to provide for a family of four, let alone, God forbid you make a mistake in planting.
3. They are providing seeds that won't necessarily grow in your area, because of your climate and soil conditions.

All in all these high priced rip-offs provide a false sense of security... and they could cost you your life.

So what can you do?

Get the right seeds. . . and a lot of them.

500,000+ Free Seeds

In a minute I'll tell you how you can learn to get all the seeds you and your family will ever need – for FREE!

Up to 12 full lbs. of organic seeds per year, custom tailored and GUARANTEED to grow where you live.

But first, I want to be sure you understand why seeds are so important.

What Will You Do When The Food Runs Out?

We have real food problems that are secretly getting worse...

We're so used to grocery stores loaded with almost every food imaginable that it's hard to believe even basic food items could be hard to get some day.

But it's true. . .

The end of cheap oil, the depletion of top soil, the draining of key aquifers, global economic inflation, and food diseases are all putting pressure on food supplies – in a way that makes a world-wide food crisis virtually inevitable.

Just consider these signs that global food shortages may be just around the corner. . .

- ◆ The prices of key farm commodities continue to rise – in some cases almost doubling since last summer.
- ◆ Drought has forced some big wheat producing countries to ban all exports, leading to reduced world-wide supplies.
- ◆ The amount of food in the world's silos and stockpiles keeps falling at an alarming rate.
- ◆ During the 2008 credit meltdown, the political and banking classes feared the next step could have been mass starvation – and we're more vulnerable today!
- ◆ In a prolonged financial crisis, credit lines will be cut, making even available food unable to be delivered. . . and left to rot unused.
- ◆ The trend of oil prices continues upward, affecting food prices across the board – and forcing some forms of food production to no longer be viable.

- ◆ Shrinking water supplies are already forcing some nations into a state of near total dependency for basic food staples.
- ◆ Diseases such as “wheat rust” are a worrisome threat, putting global food stability at extreme risk.
- ◆ The rapidly depleting Ogallala Aquifer has U.S. farmers fearing a return to the days of the “Dust Bowl.”
- ◆ The elimination of the family farm and the rise of massive agribusinesses have concentrated the control of food production in the hands of just a small but powerful group.

Together, these factors have put your access to food at stake in a way that has not been experienced for generations. . .

Add to this ongoing wars, unusual weather patterns, growing financial troubles – including a dying U.S. Dollar – and we're all vulnerable to our shrinking food supply.

And, if we suddenly face even a little political or social unrest, it won't take much to empty grocery shelves in a hurry.

Who Will Provide Food To Your Family, Friends and Neighbors?

Are you ready to be in charge of your food supply?

Most grocery stores have about a three-day supply of food for their shelves – and even less for high demand staples like bread and milk.

On top of that, most households have very little food reserves – in fact, there are plenty of people who need to make a trip to the store almost daily once they finally decide what they want for dinner!

What does all this mean? The typical American household is not prepared for a food shortage of any length of time.

Just imagine a situation that forces the grocery stores to shut their doors – because they have nothing on their shelves to sell.

Where would that put you and your family?

It's a question any responsible person has to face.

Preparing Now Could Mean Survival Later

The big question is. . . Are you prepared for such a situation?

Your answer will make all the difference. . .

Will you and your family be among the dependent masses, or will you be able to take care of your own – and even help others?

You may have the best of intentions, but getting prepared while you still can is critical.

The first step to get prepared is to store some food.

Start buying extra of the non-perishable items you already eat. And make a habit of rotating and replacing these common items. Having these reserves will help you for a time. . .

But this is not enough. Stored food eventually goes bad. . . or gets used up.

So, you also need to take a second step, which is get ready to grow some food.

A food storage program will only take you so far – especially in a real crisis. What you need is a system to provide food for yourself and your family for the long haul. . . and this is where having the right supply of seeds comes in.

Is your seed collection right for you?

Seeds have been a big business for a long time. Billions worth of seed-based commodities are traded every single day. And companies like Monsanto are huge. . . and powerful.

But today, with our looming food crisis, the demand for seeds has grown among individual consumers as well, as they take responsibility to prepare for an uncertain future.

To meet the needs of these consumers, different companies have sprung up to supply seeds for survival purposes.

But caveat emptor. . . buyers needs to beware. . . they need to be sure the seeds they are getting are really right for them.

Of course, you want quality, heirloom or non-GMO seeds. . . because these are the healthiest and will reproduce year after year.

But beyond that, your seeds should meet three basic, but often overlooked criteria. . .

First, they shouldn't be expensive. After all, there are plenty of seeds around you right now that you can get for free.

Second, the seeds that you get should be plentiful. You need a big supply so you can absorb a mistake or two. . . even a bad crop.

Third, you need to be sure the seed you are depending on will actually grow in your area, in keeping with your climate and soil conditions.

Fulfilling this criteria is not hard. . . you just need to know how.

And you can learn how with the Seeds for Life System.
